This project is dedicated to creating an educational tool which will portray the Ethiopian Jewish culture and its arts as it exists in Ethiopia and Israel. The name of the project is "Ethiopian Museum in a Suitcase". The museum's activities incorporate cultural artifacts, traditional clothing, musical instruments and creative workshops weaved in the personal tale of me. The activity is for all students religious or not. The Museum in a Suitcase asks to create an active intercultural meeting between the Ethiopian culture and Israeli society, in hopes of dissolving stereotypes and prejudice views

In addition, Museum in a Suitcase is the only representation/exhibition of the Ethiopian culture within any large scale museum in Israel. This fact can cause several children born into Ethiopian Israeli families not be familiar with their ancestors traditions from their motherland's culture as well as deliberately ignoring their ancestral traditions due to the fear of stereotypes and prejudices of society.

This paper examines three unique features inside the Ethiopian Museum in a Suitcase, its portability, the use of cultural artifacts and the personal narrative of me. By examining each unique feature in light of present day research and literature, I will analyze the pedagogical advantage of the project for educational options.

I hope that this analysis will help improve, develop and broaden its message in many educational facilities.
